MassMutual: 'We're hiring'

Memphis Business Journal

The Massachusetts Mutual Life Insurance Co. has “dozens” of job openings in the Memphis area for financial services professionals.

The Memphis openings are a part of the Springfield, Mass.-based firm's national campaign to recruit 2,000 independent contractors.

“We're recruiting dozens of new agents right now and we're working hard to attract top talent. To do this we need to offer an unrivaled package of incentives, training and support,” said Scott Rich, vice president of field force development for MassMutual, in a statement.

MassMutual pays the tuition and fees for agents who earn industry designations and college degrees up to and including a master's of science degree in financial services.

Agents who build their own financial services practice within the MassMutual agency may receive office space, administrative staff, utilities and nearly everything related to setting up and growing their practice, MassMutual said. Eligible agents also receive an income subsidy for up to three years.
